

An aerial photograph of a large body of water, likely a port or harbor. A prominent, long, narrow pier or breakwater structure extends from the shore into the water. The water is dark, and the surrounding land is visible with some buildings and infrastructure. The text is overlaid on the image.

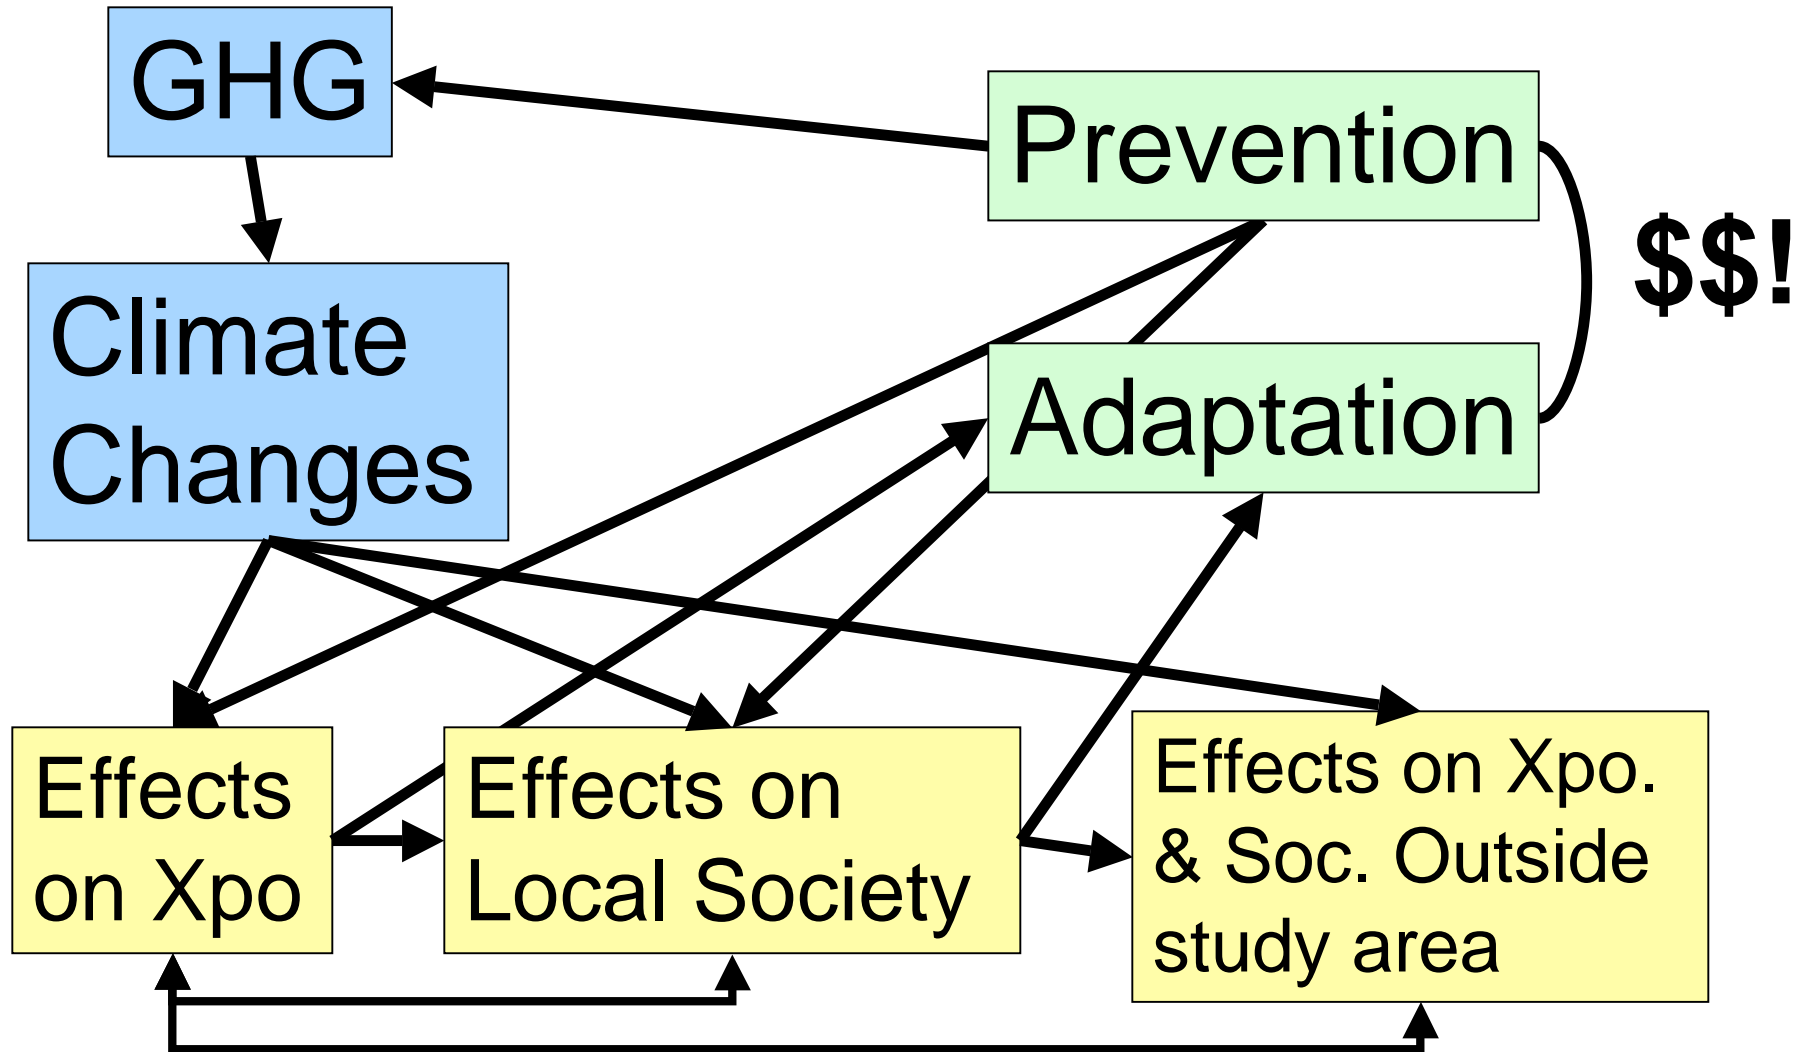

Managing the scope of Climate Change

Burr Stewart
Port of Seattle
May 21, 2007

Climate Change Basics

Clarifying causes & effects

Scope Boundaries

